Course Objectives	This course aims to teach the importance of creativity in contemporary advertising. Students learn the theoretical and practical aspects of the advertising industry. In this course, the results of creative advertising are handled in a social and commercial context. At the same time, methods that are becoming increasingly important in the advertising creation process, including viral and guerilla marketing, are discussed in detail. Students analyze the stories of selected advertising campaigns that have received successful returns on a national and international scale, and develop the ability to identify key features of creative advertising.
Course Learning Outcomes	Advertising Design course will teach students how to integrate their creativity skills in advertising design process. In addition, within the scope of the course, evaluations will be made on the returns occurred by creative advertising in the market. Students will also have knowledge and skills about new approaches in the production process of advertising.
